They greeted him cordially and the trio were soon engaged in conversation. Mr. were soon engaged in conversation. Mr. Nicoll and Senator Fassett were not long in getting into a rather warm discussion, which was overheard by persons seared on sofas.

Mr. Nicoll averred that he, as the representative of the Demogratic minority of the investigation! had not been fairly or courteously treated. Mr. Nicoll understood at yesterday's adjournment of the hearing that it would be continued on next Monday. Another dangerous spot on the way down the East River is the reef of rocks which extends from the lower point of Blackwell's Island towards the New York shore.

The raft came through Hell Gate almost precisely at noon. At the prow was the tug Underwriter, while on the port side were the tugs Scandinavian, May Sniffin and Battler. The Baltic and another tug were on the starboard side, while the stalward Ocean King looked after the stern. As the raft swung into the river there was a great screeching from the various steam craft and shouts from the hundreds of people who lined the New York shore from Eightyfourth to Ninety-second streets. The west channel was selected in passing Blackwell's Island.

Three hundred pseule congregated on the Before his departure he telegraphed to Vice-President Dowling to come down from the Catskills and act as Mayor. There is a small stretch of river to be seen above Fourteenth street, and at 1.05 an Evenno World reporter, with a set of fine marine glasses to his eyes, was able to announce to the waiting crowd that the big raft was ploughing her way into view.

The first intimation of the approach of the monster was scurrying of other craft to the sides of the river. They gave Joggins a wide berth, and her speed and size was enough to induce alacrity on their part.

The tide was going out very swiftly, and with the aid of the six tags the monster was making Maud S. time.

Parfor chairs, both on boat and train, are secured by one ticket. No more pleasant trip can be made than that on the Monmouth, leaving the city at 9.30 4. M. and returning in the cool of the evening by same boat. Regularity in time, attentive employees, comfort and safety for all is the keynote to the success of the Sandy Hook route. NEW YORK, SATURDAY, AUGUST 11, 1888.

GOT BY "THE EVENING WORLD'S" YOUNG MEN WHILE THEIR RIVALS SLEPT.

THE FIRST NEWS OF BLAINE

Three Days They Sailed the Waters and Their Tug First Met the City of Lome-Back to the City with Mr. Crawford's Report-Vim and Enterprise Once More Carried the Day.

When Mr. Blaine left his berth on board the City of New York at about five o'clock yesterday morning he was greeted with three toots of the whistle of THE WORLD'S tug, the Edwin Hawley, as she started away with "the latest news" and with an ample force of reporters working hard on board.

A few hours later, when Mr. Blaine stepped from the Laura M. Starin to the dock at West Twenty-second street he was welcomed on all sides and wherever he went by youthful voices shouting: "Extra! EVENING WORLD extra! All about Blaine's arrival!"

The newsboys were scouring the whole city, and their papers, containing news of Mr. Blaine which no other paper got for several hours, sold like fresh taffy at a country fair. It contained a complete account of the voyage of the Man from Maine, the news of arrival and triumphal progress up the har-ber, and information as to his plans and prospects.

Tag Evening World thus held the entire field exclusively, having beaten all com-petitors by as long a time here as its repre-sentatives did in reaching the City of New York and learning the news of the voyage.

The Wonder's tug was a prominent figure in the lower bay during the two days of waiting for the steamer.

The tug left its dock at Pier 9 East River at noon on Wednesday and steamed around to Pier 20 North River, where the Sain Sloan with its load of distinguished Re-Sloan With Its load of distinguished Re-publicans were waiting to hear of the approach of the City of New York. Near it was the Young Men's Republican Club of Chicago on a small steamer, and all cheered lustily The World's tug as she approached them and Cappa started up an inspiring air on the Sam Stoan.

Down the bay to Sandy Hook a reporter in the pilot-house of the Edwin Hawley was kept busy pulling the whistle-string in answer to the saiutes of the various craft which swer to the salutes of the various craft which were passed.

The tug remained under the lee of the Hook all the afternoon, and the other boats which were there to welcome Blaine followed suit. The confidence in TRE WORLD'S ability was plainly shown by the watch which was kent of its tug. A movement of the Hawley meant a movement of all the boats around her, and thus the floilla of boats was headed by TRE WORLD'S banner wherever it went.

Thursday morning came and brought no news. During the day an Evening World representative was stationed in the tower with the operator, and in case any news of the City of New York was received there he was to fly a red flag from the flagstaff on the tower.

Things went merry on the tug, and many a lively yarn was spun. Once it was sadly research to the tole of the city of the contract of the city of the contract of the city of the contract of the city was a part of the city of the contract of the city of t

Things went merry on the tug, and many a lively yarn was spun. Once it was saily regretted that foll Nye had preferred his joke column to a two days' outing, but things soon went on lively again.

Thursday evening showed no visible signs of the steamship, but as everything pointed towards her arrival soon the watch in the tower was doubled and, though somewhat the worse for wear, every one was more alert. Steam was kept up and everything was ready for a quick departure.

Another newspaper boat was near, but the Blaine watchers on beard were sleepy and so all of them went to bed and trusted to luck for their securing the news.

all of them went to bed and trusted to luck for their securing the news.

The moment the long-expected ship was sighted at Fire Island at 1.15 a. M. the reporters on The Woald's tug got the news and the start to sea was quickly made.

All steam was put on and the Hawley went bounding over the waves at a great rate.

The big steamer came to anchor about five miles off the Hook. At 5 o'clock the Hawley went up to her, and soon a reporter had in his hand a complete story of the trip, written by Mr. Crawford, of the London bureau of The World, who accompanied Mr. Blaine on the City of New York.

on the City of New York.

There was no delay in running back to the Hook, where two reporters were left to tele graph the news, while the remainder started on the tug for New York with the complete story of the voyage.

This is the story of how The Evening World put that extra on the street such a long way shead of its contemporaries. It was a marvel which no one could understand, but it was attributed to The Evening World's enterprising way of doing things. The last the reporters in the tower at Sandy Hook saw of the beat of the rival paper was at 3.30 o'clock, when she was chasing after at 3.30 o'clock, when she was chasing after the big steamer, being distanced at every revolution of her wheel.

At this time the news of the voyage, an interesting interview with Mr. Blaine and the scenes and incidents of the arrival and sail up the bay were in The Evening World's office, and rapid typesetters and pressmen were giving the public the news they had so eagerly awatted. It was the result and reward of journalistic enterprise and hard work, and is a proof of what The Evening World can and does do for its readers in a great emergency.

Cardinal Gibbons delivered the sermon. He said :

CARDINAL GIBBONS'S SERMON And Jonathan and Simon took Judah, their rother and buried him in the sepulchre of their other in the city of Modin. And all the people of scale becaled him with great lamentation and hey mourned for him many days and said: look is the mighty talen that saved the people of scale.—1 Matt. ix, 19-21.

How is the mighty inlien that saved the people of Israel.—I Matt. 1x, 19-21.

Well might the children of Israel bewalt their great chipain who led them so often to battle and to visiory. And well may this nation grieve for the loss of the mighty cheftaln whose mortal remains now lie before us. In every city and town and village of the country from the Atlantic to the Pacific his name is uttered with sorrow and his great deeds recorded with admiration.

There is one consoling feature that distinguishes the obseques of our illustrious hero from those of the great herew leader. He was buried in the midst of war, and the clashing of arms and surrounded by the armed hosts of the enemy. Our captain, thank God, is buried amid profound pears, while we are enjoying the blessings of domestic tranquillity and are in friendship with all the world. The death of Got, Sheridan will be lamented not only by the North out also of the South. I know the Southern people; I know their chivalry; I know the Southern people; I know the South of mounting on the bier of the great General They recognize the fact that the nation's General They recognize the fact that the nation's loss. And this universal sympathy, coming from all sections of the country, irrespective of party lines, is easily accounted for when we consider that under an overruing Providence the war in which Gen. Sheridan took such a conspicuous part has resulted in increased blessings to every State of our common country. in increased blessings to every State of our con non country. THEN AND NOW.

THEN AND NOW.

There's a divinity that shapes our ends, rough how them how we will."

And this is true of nations as well as of individuals. What constitutes the great difference between the wars of antiquity and our recent war? The war of the olden time was followed by subjugation and bondage. In the train of our great struggle came recogclitation and freedom. Alexander the Great waded through the blood of his fellow-man. By the sword he conquered and by the sword he kept the vanquished in bondage. Scarcely was he cold in death when his vassais shook off the yoke and his empire was dismembered into fragments.

The effect of the late war has been to weld together the nation still more closely in one cohesive body; it has removed once for all slavery, the great apple of discord; it has broken down the wall of separation which divised section from section, and examits us more strikingly as one naspirations.

SHERIDAN'S TRAITS OF CHARACTER.

In surveying the life of Gen. Sheridan, it seems to me that these were his prominent features and the selient points in his character—undannted heroism combined with gentleness of disposition; strong as a lion in war, gentle as a child in peace; bold, daring, fearless, undannted, unheatating, his courage rising with the danger, ever fertile in resources, ever prompt in execution, his rapid movements never impelled by a blind impulse, but ever prompted by a calculating mind.

I have neither the time nor the ability to dwell upon his military career from the time he left West Point till the close of the war. Let me select one incident which reveals to us his quickness of conception and resultness of execution. I refer to his famous ride in the valley of Virginia. As he is advancing along the road he sees his routed army rushing pell-inell towards him. Quick as thought, by the glance of his eye, by the power of his word, by the strength of his will, he huris back that living stream on the enemy and snatches victory from the jaws of defeat. How bold in war, how gentle in peace!

On some few occasions in Washington I had the fleasure of meeting Gen. Sheridan socially in private circles. I was forcibly struck by his gentlemess of disposition, his amable manner, his unassuming deportment, his eye, learning with good nature, and his volce scarcety rasked above a whisper.' I said to myself, is this baseful man and retring citzen the great General of the American army? Is this the hero of so many battles?

GEN, SHERIDAN'S BUMANITY.

It is true Gen. Sheridan has been charged with It is true Gen. Sheridan has been charged with being sometimes unnecessarily severe towards the enemy. My conversations with him strongly impressed me with the groundlessness of a charge which could in no wise be reconciled with the abhorrence which he expressed for the atroctices of war, with his natural aversion to docushed, and with the hope he uttered he would never again be obliged to draw his sword against an enemy. I am persuaded that the sentiments of humanity ever found a congenial home, a secure lodgment in the breast of Gen. Sheridan. Those who are best acquainted with his military career notic in saying that he never needlessly sacrificed numsn life and that he loved and cared for his soldiers as a father loves and cares for his chotres. "Will the coming woman be baldheaded?" is the query of an inquisitive scribbler. No; to have

But we must not forget that if the departed hero was a soldier, he was also a citizen, and if we wish to know how a man stands as a citizen, we must ask ourselves how he stands as a son, husband and father. The parent is the source of the family, the family is the source of the family. Social life us the redex of the family life. The stream does not rise above its source.

Now, Mr. Director, Take Your Choice.

Those who were admitted into the inner circle of Gen. Sheridan's home need not be told that it was a peaceful and happy one. He was a fond husband and affectionate father, lovingly devoted to his wife and children. I hope I am not treapassing upon the sacred privacy of domestic life when I state that the General's sickness was accelerated, if not aggravated, by a fatiguing journey which he made, in order to be home in time to assist at a domestic celebration in which one of his children was the central figure.

Above all, Gen. Sheridan was a Christian. He died fortified by the consolations of relivion, having his trust in the saving mercies of our Redeemer and an humble hope in a blessed immortanty.

5 O'CLOCK EXTRA THE BAY RIDGE GONE

PRICE ONE CENT

Destroyed by Fire on the Sound This Morning.

One Man Falls Back into the Flames and Dies.

Glenwood Lighted Up by the Lurid Blaze.

The sixteen employees of the handsome Sound steamer Bay Ridge were seen early this morning by the startled summer residents of Glenwood, L. I., leaping over the guard-rails into the placid waters of the Sound, which for a mile around were reddened by the glare of the burning boat. The Bay Ridge was shortly afterwards burned to the water's edge and left barely floating, a black and smouldering hulk.

The fire had burst out so suddenly that there was no chance of extinguishing it, and the officers and crew were forced to leap for their lives. Most of them were fortunately uninjured. Capt. Geers, who used to be on the Americus, escaped unburt and proceeded at once to call the roll of his employees on shore.

All were present and accounted for except Fritz Laudmann, the barkeeper, a wellknown German, who had hosts of acquaint-known German, who had hosts of acquaintances and friends in New York.

An outery was raised and an attempt made to return to the rapidly burning hull of the vessel, but it was in vain, and it was then discovered that Landr ann had been seen to fall back into the flames and cease any effort towards saving his life.

Landmann was a brother-in-law of Mr.
Beur, who keeps Baur's Hotel at One Hundred and Thirty-third street and Third avenue, and managed that place for Baur three years ago. He was a social, good-natured man of some thirty-five years of age, well-todo and industrious.

do and industrious. WAS IT A PRESENTIMENT?

Yesterday aftermoon on their way up from the city on the Bay Ridge, the purser and Landmann were chaffing each other in a good-natured way. At Glenwood the purser asked Landmann what he remand on the beat for when his family lived at Glenwood. The end of the route had been reached and the passengers discharged, but Laudmann, who seemed procecupied, did not offer to go

He answered the purser that he was too tired to go home last night, having been up late and working hard the night before. He said he would, for an exception, sleep on the boat.

The exception was his destruction.

HISTORY OF THE BAY BIDGE. The Bay Ridge was one of the best known passenger steamers on the sound. She was very popular with the summer residents of White Stone, Point Viow, Glen Cove, Glenwood, Sand's Point and Roslyn, on her regular daily route from Peck Slip and Thirty-first street.

Between some of those points and New York she was the only direct means of com-munication, although several of them were also on the route of the rival passenger steamer Idlewild, which has been for some time waging a war with the Bay Ridge people and attracted much attention in Sound travel a week or two ago by successful efforts to prevent the Bay Ridge landing at Great Neck, the first point in the Idlewild's itin-

Neck, the first point in the Idlewild's itinerary.

The Bay Rifige had recently been overhauled and repaired at an expense of some $15,000. It is said she cost originally $65,000. She was insured and was generally considered as being now worth about $40,000.

A large share of her was owned by Louis Berndt, who owns the hotel at Sands Point, and who is now cut off from communication with the city except by the steamers Idlewild and Martin, owned by the Smith Brothers, which also run north from Peck slip along the summer resort points on the Sound. George Ehret, the ten-millionaire brewer, who owns so much of Sands Point, is said also to have been a large owner of the Bay Ridge.

The vessel had a carrying capacity of about

The vessel had a carrying capacity of about 1,000. She was a swift, handsome boat and highly esteemed as a carrier and passenger loat. Several of the places to which the Bay Ridge ran are now cut off from direct communication with the city. At Roslyn William Cullen Bryant, long a regular commuter on the Sound steamers, used to have his summer home.

The cause of the fire is not known, but it is thought by some to have been incendiary.
